“ As a little girl I remember going to Grandma and Pa's house in Frisco with Mama (JoAnn), Aunt Evelyn and Aunt Betty all in the kitchen cooking. Actually back then it was "frying". They would be laughing and talking about anything and everything. Of course after dinner the "GIRLS" had to wash the dishes. This was a chore that I loved until it was time for the pots and pans which Vickie and I cleverly hid in the oven on many occasions only to regret it later.

Then fast forward to my school days to one of the rent houses that was shared by us (Mama & Joey) and Aunt Betty, Teddy and Peewee. It was on a piece of land that was once a gravel pit and dairy farm. Only in Texas! Mama and Aunt Betty worked hard to take care of us kids while we fished & swam at the railroad tresses, shot big rats in the barn and rode horses that did not belong to us. Did I mention I was the only girl in this mix of "BOYS" who teased me about the leaches in the river at the fishing hole, scared the day lights out of me in the rat infested barn and left me on my butt when the horse Teddy and I were riding threw me off. Oh yeah, Teddy's 1st car had a rotted out floor board and that is where the "boys" made me ride.

Fast forward to my late 20's...Mama, Aunt Evelyn and Aunt Betty were in the kitchen "frying", laughing, talking and asking me when I was getting married. But what these wonderful, brave and strong woman had taught me was...DON'T GET MARRIED!
Be independent and work hard for the things you want and need without a man. And I must have listened as I was 32 when I married and started a family.

Angelo and I would drive in from Dallas to the country for these big pot-luck meals. There were always lots of family members and extended family. But at the heart of all the babies crying, kids running in and out of the house, dogs barking, Jackie pretending to be Elvis with Teddy explaining that he couldn't sing and so on, there was Mama, Aunt Evelyn and Aunt Betty. They were the heart of family gatherings.

To this very day I love being in the kitchen with anyone who will join me. I love to cook and bake while laughing and talking about anything and everything just like Mama and my Aunt's. These days we don't hide the pots and pans or fry too much but, we have a glass of something and I remember where I came from, my Mama and my strong and brave Auntie's.
