“ There will come a day when the tears of sorrow will softly flow into tears of remembrance...and your heart will begin healing itself...and grieving will be interrupted by episodes of joy...and you will hear the whisper of hope. There will come a day when you will welcome the tears of remembrance...as a sun shower of the soul...a turning of the tide...a promise of peace. There will come a day when you will...risk loving...go on believing...and treasure the tears of remembrance. All those sleeping in their graves will wake up and sing for joy. As the sparkling dew refreshes the earth, so the Lord will revive those who have long been dead.”-Isa. 26:19.

“ Such a void in our lives when we lost Louise & Donald. May the God of all comfort wrap His loving arms around each of you and fill you with peace. I know Louise is with Her Lord and no longer in pain. She had such courage and was a real fighter. I cherish our times together and will always remember how she wanted to live just one hour beyond Donald's so that she could take care of him. She gave of herself. She had a servant's heart. We will be with her again.

“ Randy, I am so sorry for the loss of your mom. She was a sweetheart. I wish I could have known her longer than I did. I know this year has been extremely hard on you and your family. Your mom was blessed to have you in her life. You were there for her through it all, all the way til the end. I know that meant the world to her. Im glad that you were able to spend all last week with her even as hard as it was on you to see her that way. Just know,that when your broken heart heals, you will cherish those last few days. She left this earth knowing how much you really loved her.
