“ Hey Chief, Man sure did miss you at Whataburger Saturday, I'm sitting down to write this letter to you, but I'm struggling to find the words. I never thought I'd have to say goodbye to you so soon. Your passing has left a gaping hole in everyone's life, and I'm still trying to come to terms with the fact that you're no longer here.

I want you to know how much your friendship meant to me. You were more than just a friend - you were a confidant, a partner in crime, and a constant source of support and encouragement. Your laughter, your smile, and your infectious enthusiasm brightened up even the darkest of days.

I'll never forget the countless memories we shared, from our spontaneous adventures on fire calls to running calls just because someone stumped their toe. And I am sure going to miss the calls from you saying where you are today.

As I say goodbye, I want you to know that I'll carry you with me always. Your memory will continue to inspire me, motivate me, and push me to be the best version of myself. I'll keep your spirit alive in my heart and strive to make you proud.

Rest now, Jack. You may be gone, but you'll never be forgotten. You will be missed more than words can express, but I'll keep celebrating our friendship and the impact you had on my life.
