“ I was one of her students her first year teaching 5th grade at Frenship in Wolfforth. The following year she moved up to 6th grade reading and again, there she was. I didn't realize she was so young or that she had just graduated from college when I walked in her room. She showed a lot of patience with me. Patience I did not earn but she didn't care. She sat with me a lot to understand why I was the way I was. She didn't need that kind of kid her first year but she handled it splendidly. I cannot believe she has passed. 2003 I was briefly in contact with her. We just talked about "old" times when I was in middle school. I'm in shock. So much has happened since then. Dang it. 2019. There was plenty of time for me to tell her I had become a teacher after all these years. She would have never believed I'm in education the amount of trouble I caused that poor sweet young lady. I did apologize to her for the kind of kid I was back then. Thank you Ms. Dosser for showing compassion to me.

“ I'll never forget when I called you and your dad said you might want to come over. I got to your house and you were white as a ghost! It seemed someone had come to your bank and gave you a note they wanted money. Like a note where you were being held up! It was so unreal! I also think about how we used to laugh in the Del Mar music building. And how Rick thought we talked too fast! I miss you sweet friend! God is with you and you are singing in His choir now! Love you, Jill!

“ Jill and I had a ball in high school. Cruising Sonic. Choir concerts. Prom. Sleep overs. Trying to turn that wheel in her wagoner with no power steering!! Trading clothes so we could double our wardrobe. Having a contest to see who could gain the most weight. (Not a problem now). Going to Del Mar college together. Just being friends. I loved Jill like a sister. She was always kind smiling telling jokes and being a big ole goofball. I used to make fun of how she said tortilla. Jill said /tor tillllllll uh/. I loved you Jill Doss Coody. You are a sweet sweet angel and I can still hear your laugh today. I miss you dear friend. The Lord is holding your hand now. You were an amazing daughter, sister, friend, and mom to Doss Coody. He was lucky to have such a cool mom. God is with you my friend. Love you!!! ❤️❤️❤️❤️❤️❤️
