

Michael Patrick Prim

October 5, 1956 - September 8, 2014

Michael “Mike” Prim of Corsicana passed away unexpectedly on September 8, 2014 at the age of 57. Mike was born on October 5, 1956 in Ojai, California to Eileen and Edward Prim.

Mike graduated Eisenhower High School in Houston, Texas in 1974. He received a track scholarship to attend Stephen F. Austin State University where he pursued his lifelong dream of becoming a teacher. There, he met Angie Guyer and they later wed in Nacogdoches on June 30, 1984.

In the summer of 1985, Mike accepted employment at Navarro College in Corsicana, Texas as an English and World Literature instructor. This year marked his 30th year with Navarro College. Mike truly had a passion for teaching and was an inspiration to his students, friends, and peers. Mike saw the potential in every student who walked through his office and classroom door. He especially loved to mentor students who sought out his advice with their studies, career plans, and personal challenges.

Not only was Mike Prim an admired and brilliant professor, he was a devoted husband, amazing dad, loving brother, uncle, and friend. He enjoyed working out at the YMCA and watching practice sessions of the Navarro College football team. From golfing to boxing, and every sport in between, Mike was a true sports fan.

“ My name is Michael Marquardt and it is sad to admit, but I have just learned of Mike's death.. I am not a former student or colleague, but knew Mike in high school. We played football, baseball and ran track together at Eisenhower High School. Outside of school, we played many hours of basketball and football at our homes and were family in each other's homes. I learned of Mike's death at a recent High School reunion where there were many gasps and tears shed when this was mentioned. My regret is that I did not continue our friendship beyond high school. My wonderful memories of Mike revolve around our friendship in high school, but after reading the comments, I missed an opportunity to continue a relationship with a tremendous person who impacted the lives of many, many people. Today, there is a deep hole in my heart, but I so much look forward to filling this hole when we meet again.

“ I am devastated to hear about Mr. Prim's passing. I, too, was just Googling him to make contact. He was my freshman high school English teacher 36 years ago. He was a brand new teacher back then (just 23 years old, wow). I was terribly insecure at 14, but his class made a significant impact on my life and who I became as an adult. He believed in me, in all of his students, unlike any teacher I'd ever seen. He specifically made a point to tell us that we all had amazing gifts, what they were, and that we should know that about ourselves. He gave us opportunities to grow and shine. I remember how much he mourned the death of John Lennon. Because of him, I learned more about John Lennon. I grew to really loving learning about myself and the world. I can only imagine the impact he had on all the college students he had all these years. It occurred to me several years ago that I should track him down and send him a letter thanking him. I'm so sad that I didn't jump on that. I'm sure he knows he made an impact on many people. I just hope he realized how much. Thank you, Mike Prim, for being such a bright light sharing your gifts the fullest. You are missed, even by those who knew you long ago.

“ My name is Kenneth Masenda, and I am a former student of Mr. Prim's ENGL 1301 and ENGL 1302 courses. I was enrolled as a college student fresh out of high school in August 2000 and swore I was a great writer. And then I met Mr. Prim (LOL).

Mr. Prim taught me nuances about writing that I had no clue existed, nuances I still look for today. He taught me the smallest details, and I was forever grateful to him for doing so. That was 16 years ago, and I still remember things he taught me. He was that important in my life and his classes got to the point that I couldn't wait to go, and as an 18 and 19-year-old college student at the time, that was rarely the case. I eventually earned my doctorate last December and always remember him as one of the biggest influences of my life in education.

I had no idea he passed away until just now when I was literally searching Google to look up his information, so I could send him a hello, or come back to 'The Can' and pay him a visit. He was a great man, and I'll miss him.

“ I'm kind of a nobody when it comes to those who were in Mr. Prim's life, but I was a former student when I attended Navarro from fall 2010 through the fall of 2011. I was privileged to be one of his students while I played football for Navarro, and I can honestly say that he was the best and single most inspiring teacher/professor that I have ever had. though it may seem weird, I have thought about Mr. Prim often in the last 3 years since leaving Navarro. I am currently finishing up my super senior year at Appalachian State University with a degree in Secondary Business Education, a degree I chose because of how Mr.Prim inspired me to change people's lives the way he influenced mine. In my coarse work, I often dwell back to how he taught, treated, and interacted with us (his students), and I try to use him as an example for how I might conduct my classroom and treat my students someday. I was literally googling Mike today so that I could find out what his email was, if he still worked at Navarro, to just say hello and see if he remembered me, but instead I learned of his passing and my heart utterly sank. I feel as though my emotional reaction is far more severe than it should be for someone who had so little to do with the entire span of his life, but the impact he had on my life has literally shaped the future I decided to pursue for myself. Though I knew little of his personal life beyond his love for boxing and getting to chat with him on the sidelines during practice some days, I can only imagine how good of a father and husband he was, and my heart truly goes out to his family. My heart is immensely sorrowful for his passing, he was truly outstanding and beautiful hearted man.

“ He was my very first college instructor, last year at Navarro. Loved his class from day one just because of his personality and the way he taught. Such an awesome man. Always adored him and thought how lucky his daughters were to have him. But now he's smiling from above watching over them and his wife. I will always remember him, his smile and his personality. “ Mike was a valuable colleague, and I always looked forward to working registration with him. Not only did I get to hear about Hannah and Rachel but I always got to witness the way he made every student feel like an important part of Navarro College. He would begin by shaking their hand while he asked them their name and to have a seat beside him. As he input their schedule, he would visit with the student about goals, interests in life, or anything to get the student talking to where the student felt as though they were welcome at Navarro and that we as faculty truly wanted them to be here. I learned so much from Mike about relationships with students and how to truly make them feel welcome at Navarro. He will truly be missed, and his family is in my thoughts and prayers.

“ Though I only taught with Mike a couple of years after his joining the Communications Department before I left Navarro College, I can say he was very professional in his handling of classes, students, and college responsibilities. From all said about him by friends who taught with him and kept communication with me after I left the college, that same professionalism was there to the end. Students liked him, faculty liked and respected him, and I with all who have known him are most saddened and deeply feel his loss. My prayers go to Angie and their daughters and other family members at this time of sorrow. It was my understanding from a former neighbor and former colleagues that Mike was asked to teach in McAfee Daniel's Bible Study class at First Methodist in Corsicana. Mike obviously met McAfee's high standards or he would not have been asked to fill in for him when he could not teach his class. To me, that speaks volumes about Mike. I appreciate having had the privilege to know him and will look forward to an opportunity to see him again, thanks to God's love, mercies, and promises for a glorious life hereafter.

“ A passionate, inspirational teacher whose lessons echo through the lives of his students. Professor Prim taught my very first ever college course. I remember visiting his office the day before the final (I was a 16 yr old, mortified student taking my first college courses during the summer), asking him what I should work on in order to pass (back when I worshipped the almighty 'A' and not education). He told me that I would do fine and that I had written great papers...knowing that I really just needed the confidence more than anything. Along with challenging students, he inspired a sense of accomplishment and self worth and that is a very rare and wonderful thing to find.

“ Many years ago, I knew Mr. Prim very well. He was a teacher, leader, and mentor to me...and many, many others. I am now an educator, and can merely hope that I exude half the passion as Mr. Prim did at all times. He helped me, even when I wasn't in one of his classes. What an awesome impression he has made on his students. To his daughters, my heart aches for you. I lost my Mom when I was a teenager, VERY suddenly. “ My sincerest prayers of peace and comfort to Annie, Rachel, Hannah, and all who knew and loved Mike. I knew Mike first as my World Literature professor back in the late 1980s, then as a friend and colleague when I came to work for Navarro College in 2000. I've read countless testimonies these past few painful days that reminded me just how much he meant to so many people. He certainly made an impression on me as well. I will miss his visits to my office on his way to class -- and that gleam he would get in his eye at a specified point during the semester when he would tell me "Today is the day when it all comes together!" -- meaning that his intuition signaled to him that there was one missing piece of knowledge that was needed to complete the puzzle for his students, and he was about to deliver it to them. Mike's passion for teaching, his genuine concern for students, our countless conversations and movie quotes which had us rolling with laughter, and discussions about our families are the things I will miss the most about Mike. I have so many fond memories, and I am truly lucky to have known him.

I didn't get the chance to have him as my teacher at Navarro but I got a chance to have him as my neighbor for almost 14 years. Him and his family lived right across the street from my parents house. Him and his family were always so nice and even though I wasn't his student when I got to college he always offered to help me with anything I needed. Just a couple of months ago when I seen him getting into his car he told me time really flew cause he's watched my two children grow up from newborns to now being 6 and 7. “ I am so sorry to hear of the passing of Mike. I have many fond memories of growing up across the street from the Prim family. He was a great neighbor, teacher and friend. My thoughts and prayers are with Angie, Hannah and Rachel. Mike was a special guy. God bless you all.

“ Mike Prim was my friend. For more than 15 years we fought the good fight at Navarro College. His students loved him, his colleagues admired him, and administrators were often frustrated by him. That's a good teacher. His opinion was greatly valued during the building of the Pearce Museums. He would often join the discussions regarding the works of art and the soldier's letters. More than all, he brought a vitality to the teaching of literature, a love for what he did, and a friendly, caring smile. Our family grieves his loss, the world is a lesser place...I walk with mournful tread.

“ I'll always remember the times that Mike and I shared when we went all over Texas speaking to community college English instructors on interesting ways to improve an English class. Wonderful memories!

“ Mr. Prim,
You were the best English professor ever! You were the first teacher that ever made me feel like stating my opinion was okay. You once told me I was a good writer. I will never forget you! God bless your family and friends that you left behind. Save a place for us.

“ With a very heavy heart I write this. What a genuine human being. I was blessed knowing him. He was an inspiration to all, students, faculty, and staff. Every conversation I had with him was enlightening. Often we discussed how he taught mathematical principles in his English classes and how I taught English principles in my mathematics classes. He was an intelligent, inspiring, and a supportive person. Mike had a heart for everyone at Navarro College. His students loved going to his class because of the passion he had for teaching and for helping them.

He touched my life, was supportive of me, and changed my life. Mike I hope this tribute is grammatically correct and up to your high standards. I will miss you.

My heart and prayers are for his family.
